OPEN YOUR

EYES

MANY STUDENTS like Natalie Talboo opened their eyes to the reality of what was happening to their school—and worked to earn a future.

Sometimes a person has to open his eyes and take a long, hard look around him in order to realize what's happening.

Last spring Garfield Heights students did just that. And what they saw was a school system about to crumble into the rubble of state control. They saw a high school about to lose many of the things which made it a quality institution and a great place to be.

So students at the high school joined teachers, parents, and other Garfield students and worked to pass a 12.9 mill school levy which promised to save their schools, restore threatened cuts, and allow them to get the most out of their high school years.

Students wanted to open their eyes in September and see a high school filled with teachers, classes, activities, sports, and friends. They wanted to open their eyes to a school filled with pep and spirit, with punk miniskirts and preppy alligator sweaters, with girls playing basketball and students learning about computers.

They wanted to open their eyes to a future.

By Glenn Jambor

We've got spirit!

In the empty halls there are only echoes; but when they are filled with people, talk and laughter can be heard. That's when you can hear the spirit of a school. Going to the games, participating in spirit events, taking part in the various activities: at Garfield, it was all part of real spirit.

Freshmen were new to the high school but contributed to its spirit. "I liked the games between students and teachers," said Ginniann Mabe. Sophomores like Lynette Kwiatkowski were already familiar with Garfield spirit. She took stats and provided candy and locker decorations as a hockey helper.

As for juniors, spirit was common to them. Cheerleader Laurel Cywinski was glad that the teams were doing better this year, "especially basketball."

Spirit to seniors was a habit. Tracey Schors enjoyed her role as varsity cheerleader. "It was really good to see the guys dress up and paint their faces at the Trinity game," she said.

New ideas, like a Spirit Club, surfaced this year, blending with some Garfield traditions to once again show that "we've got spirit!"

Clothing styles have gone through many changes over the years. At one time the long poodle skirt was in style, while another time period brought the Marcia Brady miniskirt. In the wide world of fashion, styles steadily change. Although Garfield students didn't shop at a Beverly Hills shop or even Saks Fifth Avenue, they did move with the fashion scene and did an impressive job of showing their taste in clothes.

Each morning students dressed with tender-loving care to make sure everything was perfectly in harmony. Said senior Natalie Talboo: "A very important part of my wardrobe is what goes on my feet. For instance, my pink or purple boots."

Pink boots? Purple boots? Yes, you read it right. But even Natalie admitted she has a wide taste in clothes. Not everyone's wardrobe contained something as different as pink boots, but when it came to physical appearance, Garfield didn't lack in class or style. Our halls were crowded with many styles. Sam Freeman displayed the chic look while Debbie Shultz, Frank Wasinski and others dressed preppy. Among others, Dave Spehar and Tracey Horvath did a fine job with the punk look, while Chris Austin kept the business luncheon image.

But as always, the casual look was the most popular. Jeans, tennis shoes, jerseys, and sweaters assured Brooke Shields that she had little to worry about—for now.

Members of the Lady Bulldog basketball teams "opened their eyes" this season—but according to players on both the varsity and junior varsity, the teams should have done it earlier.

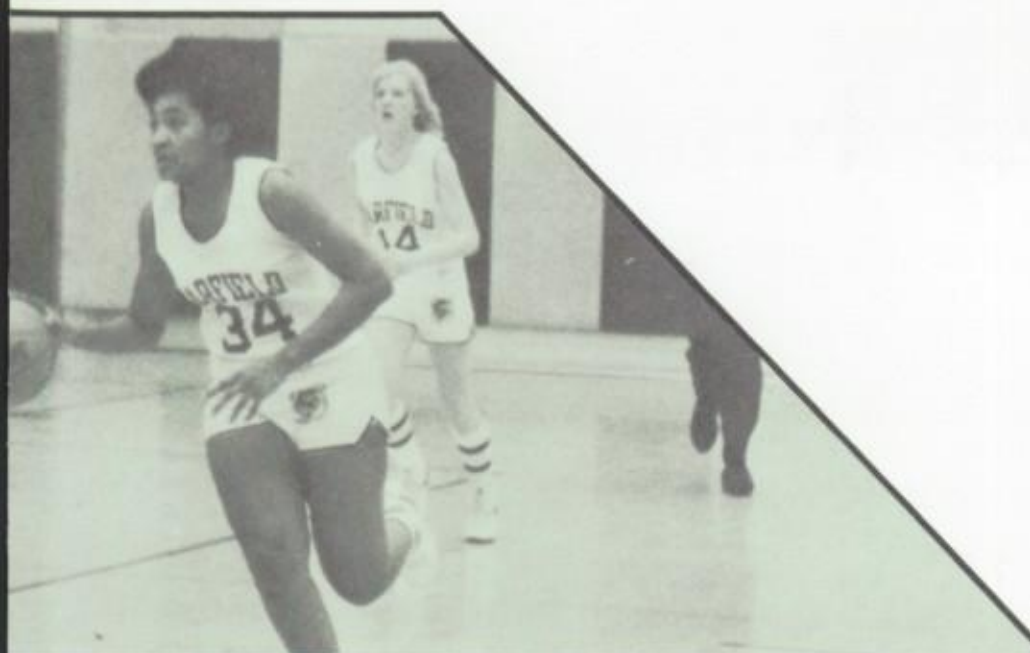

"If we had put it together in the beginning of the season," commented JV guard Kathy O'Laughlin, "we would have had a better record. We weren't ready early on."

The varsity also found things getting better as the season went on. "We seemed to improve throughout the year," said junior Janel Ciricola. The team finished its regular season with a 9-11 record, 5-9 in the Lake Erie League.

Team effort was the dominant force. Seniors Brenda Walker, Jackie Boyd, and Lisa Skerl led the varsity, with strong support from Karen Torgerson and the team's MVP, Kim Kidwell.

Tracy Gallagher, Carla Provance, and Kathy O'Laughlin were among the leaders of a well-balanced JV team which captured eight victories.

Oh no! More homework!

"Take out your books, read pages 120-130, and answer the questions; you will have a test on Friday."

"Don't forget, book reports are due Monday."

Sound familiar? To most students, these remarks reveal what they did on an average day of school. In lunch, between classes, and on the phone at night, students complained about all the homework they had to do. It was all a part of Garfield's daily routine.

If it wasn't homework, students were preparing for tests, such as the SAT and ACT for seniors, and the PSAT/NMSQT for sophomores and juniors. Math students also had the opportunity to take the EMPT, which is a test for math placement.

Add to all of this the book reports, projects, term papers, and speeches, and you end up with a better-educated student body but also one with more gray hairs!

Trying to balance the demands of all that homework with a parttime job, extra-curricular activity, family obligations, and (last but not least) an active social life led students to wonder what all of those commissions were talking about when they recommended more homework. It was easy for them to say; they're not in high school any more.

FEEL THE IMPACT

Worldwide, people felt the impact of major events on their lives. While families impatiently awaited the message that would let them know if their sons had survived the bombing of Marine headquarters in Beirut, others were emotionally moved by the disturbing fact that a nuclear war could wipe out our entire population. More locally, young adults were relieved as a proposed law to raise the legal drinking age to 21 was defeated.

Here in Garfield Heights things weren't any different. At the high school there were many issues that affected the student body. For example, students felt the impact of a state-controlled school, so they joined together in a levy campaign to help save the school system.

Other matters had an impact on individuals. The future of the golf team looked promising as the number of golfers increased, while the bowling team had to fill many spaces vacated by key '83 graduates. Several seniors felt an impact on their last year here as they were elected to Homecoming Court, while the rest of the school worried about dates and what to wear to the Homecoming dance. There was also a great impact on the girls softball team as they struggled to learn the fast-pitch game after summers of slow-pitch.

Throughout the school many events left students feeling a variety of impacts. The good ones were stored away in their treasure chest of memories and the bad ones—well, with high spirits, they put them in the past, picked up the pieces, and moved on.

While the golfers were swinging, the bowlers were on another roll

... Like a broken record

The varsity bowling team had another fantastic year, breaking four school records along the way.

The team was coached by Mr. Hargett, with Paul Dunn and Frank Wasinski as co-captains. The other bowlers were Dion Madsen, Kelley McVoy, George Mendek, Jerry Sibits, Tim Rawlins, and John Yusko.

Garfield has participated in the interscholastic league since it was formed in 1940, and this year the Bulldogs broke the league's team series record with a total of 3,203 pins. Trying to capture the handicap division, the bowlers lost a heartbreaker to Olmsted Falls in a rolloff and finished in second place.

The team broke four school records. Madsen rolled a 734 series, and the team had a high game of 1,091 pins. Wasinski's 200 average earned him MVP honors, and Rawlins had a game of 269.

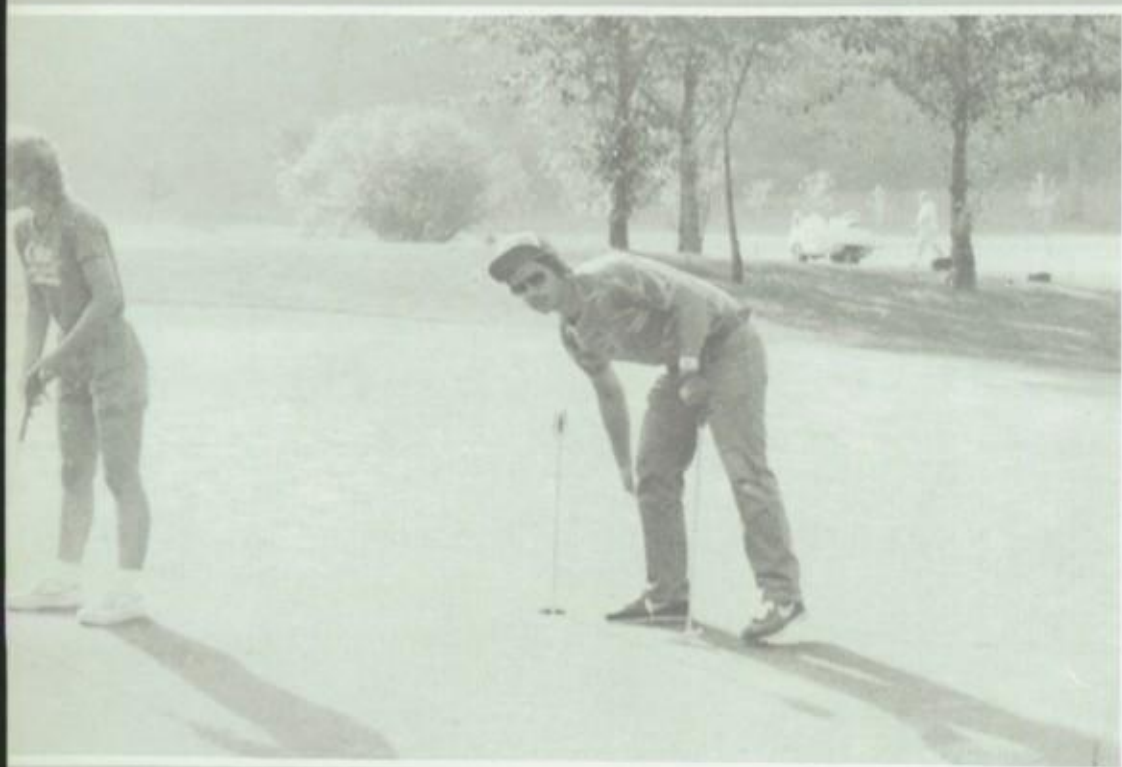

While the bowlers rolled to a winning season, the golfers of Garfield teed off to a fine season, too. The team was led by the drives and putts of senior Brad Ruminski, who had the best average. Ruminski was backed up by the rest of the team's talent. Sophomore Carmen Lubrano and seniors Dean Mahoney and Nick Carriero were singled out by Coach Krueger for their fine performances.

In the LEL tournament, Ruminski was one of the top players with a score of 81. He also placed in the sectional tournament with a 78. A total of 17 players participated on the team this season. Home matches were played at Astorhurst where the team also practiced.

Twilight in the Tropics

Escaping into a "Tropical Paradise," students turned the evening of September 24 into a glorious memory filled with fun and friends. It was an evening of "Twilight in the Tropics," the theme of the Homecoming Dance held in the lavishly decorated cafeteria. As a fitting conclusion to Spirit Week, National Honor Society did a great job organizing the dance. "We put a lot of time and effort in making this Homecoming Dance a success, but it was worth it because we had fun," commented Mary Jankowski. Everyone danced the night away to the sounds of Redline, who entertained with a variety of contemporary and rock music. The band also played a special slow dance to recognize the Homecoming Court. Leis and pineapples were given out at the dance. "It was very homecomingish," chuckled Robbie Sigmund. As the night drew to a close, tired dancers bid their farewells to one another while Joe Bonscer "geeed" his goodbyes.

It was a memorable night, brightened by smiling faces and enjoyable moments. "I really had a good time," Lisa Pinto said, "but the part I liked the most about the dance was that everyone got along and enjoyed themselves." Added Mary Ann Raczka: "I don't remember much about what went on, but I know I had a good time!"

Saturday night, it was

Who would be the 1983-84 Homecoming King and Queen? This was the question on the minds of many students Sept. 22 as the traditional assembly was about to begin. The student body of Garfield High crowded into the gym, anxiously awaiting the announcement of the new King, Queen, and court.

When the choir sang and the trumpets sounded, the tension was finally broken. The Homecoming Queen was Darlene Shutty and the King Chris Monaco. Also elected to the royal court were Lisa Bornino, Sue Fosselman, Sharon Huml, Lisa Pinto, Karen Samardge, Rebecca Timko, Joe Bonscer, Joe Gabriele, Glen Latterner, Tim Novak, Mike Pucci, and Rob Sigmund. As the assembly ended, hundreds rushed forward to congratulate the court.

The next step for the court was to be recognized at Friday night's game. Even though rain dampened the night, Garfield spirit reigned. The band was unable to perform the traditional halftime show, but the court was still introduced to the crowd. Darlene and Chris were crowned by last year's king and queen, Jay Varhola and Denise Bugara.

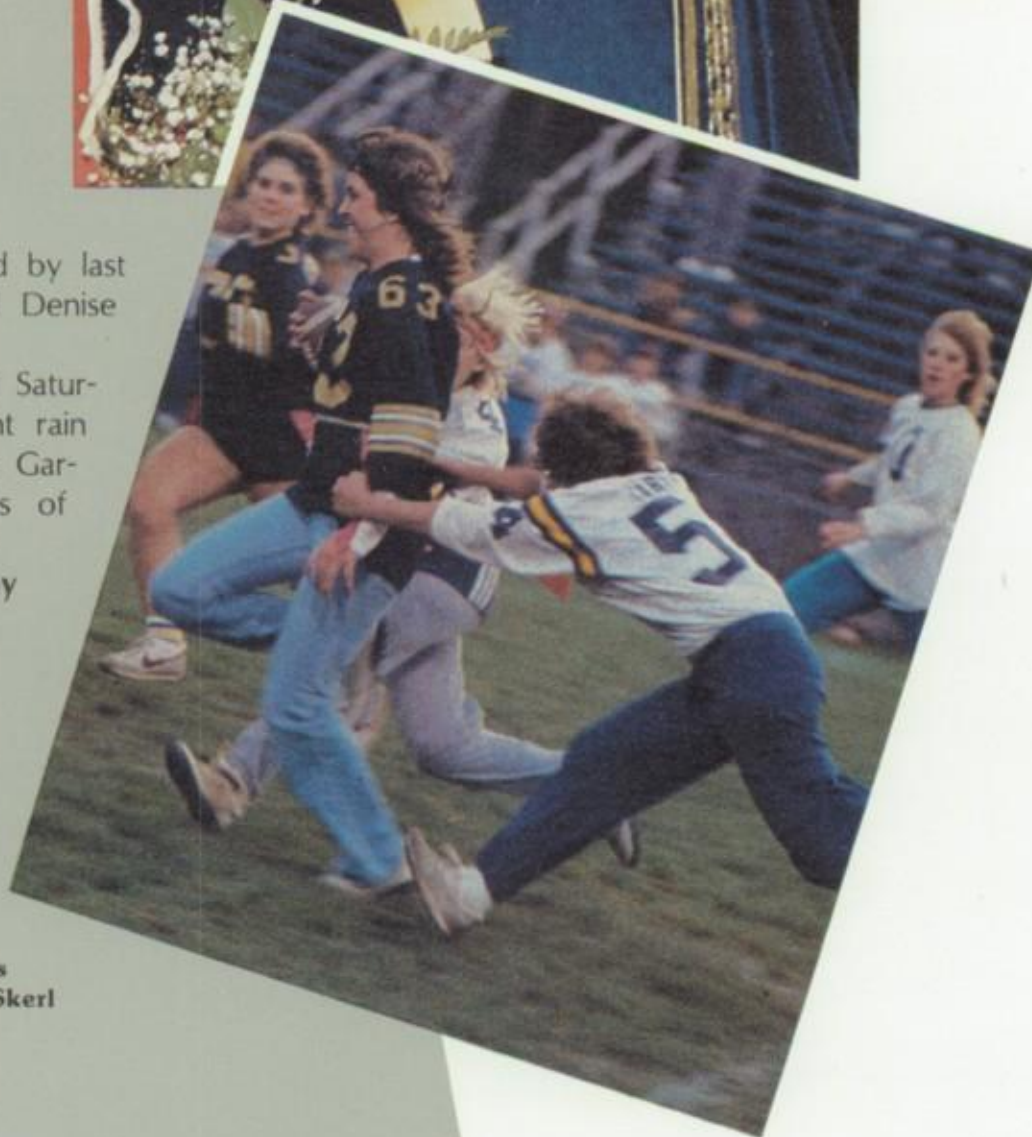

Homecoming festivities came to an end Saturday night at the dance. The Friday night rain and a loss to Valley Forge couldn't stop Garfield students from enjoying three days of Homecoming magic.

Life in the fast lane

Kim Kidwell's friends say she talks too much. Ms. Buckley describes her as a whiner. But anyone who knows Kimmy knows it's all in fun. Kim, last year's softball MVP, is an outgoing person, always in a good mood making others laugh and have a good time.

But believe it or not, Kim also has a serious side. In addition to her school sports, Kim is involved in her church's youth congress and has spent parts of her summers at sports camps.

Gloves in hand and bats at their side, the softball team was ready to stride. Or so they thought.

The 13 girls coached by Ms. Buckley felt that their spirit was strong but their ability to perform needed a lot more work than they gave it. The team finished at 4-13.

One problem was the switch a couple years back to fast pitch instead of the slow pitch that the girls play in summer leagues. "We need a feeder program or a switch to slow pitch in order to be competitive," commented Ms. Buckley.

Cathy Schrader added, "Our team had a lot of potential; we just needed to work a little harder."

Lisa Skerl pointed out, "We had a very talented team. We won two more games than last season, but with better effort we could have won even more."

The team gained confidence near the end of the season, but by then it was a little too late. About all they could promise was the familiar refrain of the Cleveland Indians: "Wait until next year!"

GET

Having things function to their full capacity requires much hard labor and dedication. With a little struggling and a little faith, Garfield students "got the works" for many issues.

The failures of the school levy in 1982 and 1983 jeopardized the 1983-84 school year. It drove students to put in extra time and effort to show the community that they cared about their education. Just as everything began to fall apart and the school system seemed shattered, their hard work paid off to pass the levy last June and allow them to begin picking up the pieces for the 1983-84 school year. But the levy was only one of many issues which required serious work.

Participants in fund-raisers showed loyalty to their class or club by selling countless items to raise money. Their hard work paid off by lowering prices of events like the prom and enabling clubs to participate in activities like clinics and camps.

Spirit Week was also an activity that could never have been successful without the efforts put into its organization and involvement by students.

It is easy to show how when you get the works, success is the result. In reality, though, it isn't always true. A lot of time, energy, and dedication went into such sports as football and soccer, which somehow couldn't get things together to have their efforts pay off. Those who were able to stick it out showed us that every time they were shattered, they still picked up the pieces and continued on. Getting the works was what it was all about.

Saving our schools

Did you ever feel like you were jinxed or setting out to do the impossible? Many students and teachers shared this confused "what am I getting myself into" feeling as they began the levy campaign. After all, look what had happened so far: The rally to launch the campaign didn't go exactly as planned due to a power failure. The first fund-raiser, a car-bash, was postponed due to rain. Add this to the fact that the levy had failed three times already, and the chances looked grim.

But students realized the horror of our school being taken over by the state. They knew their education and future, depending on the levy outcome, would either "Live or Die." So concerned, determined students and teachers kept a light of hope burning and organized SAFE—Students Asking For Education.

"Everyone joined together and contributed something," said Tammy Majors. Committees were made to saturate the city with speeches, letters, phone calls, pamphlets, and posters to let the citizens know our desperate situation. SAFE also made sure people voted, and students showed their concern by picketing the Leader for opposing the levy.

Money was raised in various ways and on June 6 SAFE gave it one last shot by parading through Garfield to show the community the need to vote yes.

June 7 held the result that let us "live"—victory! At a celebration assembly June 8, all who participated felt pride fill their hearts as Ms. Hofman said, "I thank you, I love you, God bless you." And Mr. Caruso added, "You've shared an experience you may never have again. You joined together to achieve a goal everyone felt was impossible—and you did it."

The longest season

Question: What do you get when your varsity football team has only six returning seniors and just three of them have any game experience?

Answer: A not-too-successful football team.

As a matter of fact, the Bulldogs' winless 0-9-1 record was the team's worst showing in Garfield history.

Many factors hampered this year's squad. Experience—there just wasn't enough of it. Many received their first taste of action on the field this year.

The defense was inconsistent as they held strong for two quarters but then fell apart in the second half. Being on the field most of the game contributed to this.

The offense was "ghostlike" as they frequently displayed goose eggs on the scoreboard.

Also, the loss of both quarterbacks forced head coach Michener to dust off his old play books and unveil the single wing offense for the last four games of the season.

The ancient offense was flashy but not very effective.

Junior defensive back Kevin

Rawlins expressed the views of many: "This was really a disappointing season for everyone. All that we can do is forget about it and try to look forward to next year."

The junior varsity didn't fare much better, though they did manage to beat Maple Heights, Lakewood, and Parma.

The freshmen were 0-4 this year and cancelled their last three games due to a lack of players.

Flowers, candy, hats—you name it

They sold it

Was there a day when you could walk into your 4th period English class and someone not say, "Do you want to buy a candy bar?"

Come on, let's face it. You just ate lunch and she expects you to buy a candy bar? Besides, you need money to play Donkey Kong after school.

This is what you call the fund-raising syndrome. Everyone is racing to sell the most—at your cost. That means watch it, people. They will corner you wherever you may be: class, lunch, locker, lavatory, you name it.

So the advice Garfield Heights students and teachers had to follow was hold on to your wallets and keep your eyes closed! Beware of those M&M's; they may melt in your mouth, but they put a hole in your pocket. Likewise, those flowers smell pretty and look nice, but they ring up a big bill.

Still, the worst thing for you was those candy bars. They may have satisfied your sweet tooth, but they also satisfied your dentist. However, this was all for a good cause. For example, the funds that each class made went towards their prom and other class expenses. Organizations also needed money. Student Senate was a group active in fund-raising. All of their profits went towards teacher appreciation projects, sports pictures, assemblies, and much more. The Mirror raised money through subscriptions and hat sales for the production of the school paper. Other groups, such as NHS, OWE, library pages, cheerleaders, JVS clubs, and others, sold not only candy but stationery, gifts, jewelry, flowers, and almost anything this side of Turneytown to support their own functions.

So they may have tempted you with their flashy slogans, cunning salesmanship, and unbelievable bargains, just to get your money. But all for a good cause.

Talk about an appropriate Homecoming Queen! Throughout high school Darlene Shutty has been involved in many school activities, ranging from Student Senate president to cheerleading. But Darlene has many talents and interests outside of school. One is figure skating, something she plans to do more of after graduation. Darlene also coaches cheerleaders of the Cleveland Comets, a wheelchair basketball team. And Dar's interests keep going. She loves being with friends, relaxing, having fun, sunsets, and walking through the park in the fall with her boyfriend Bob. She also likes to sew and makes little crafty objects.

Seniors won hall, spirit link, Powder Puff contests

Who has spirit? We have, that's who. And Spirit Week really showed it.

It started Monday, Sept. 19, with Concert T-Shirt Day. A variety of shirts ranged from MSB to Ozzy Osborne with Journey being the most common.

Tuesday there was a great response to Hat Day and Poster/Banner

Day. Ms. Buckley's homeroom won first place for their banner.

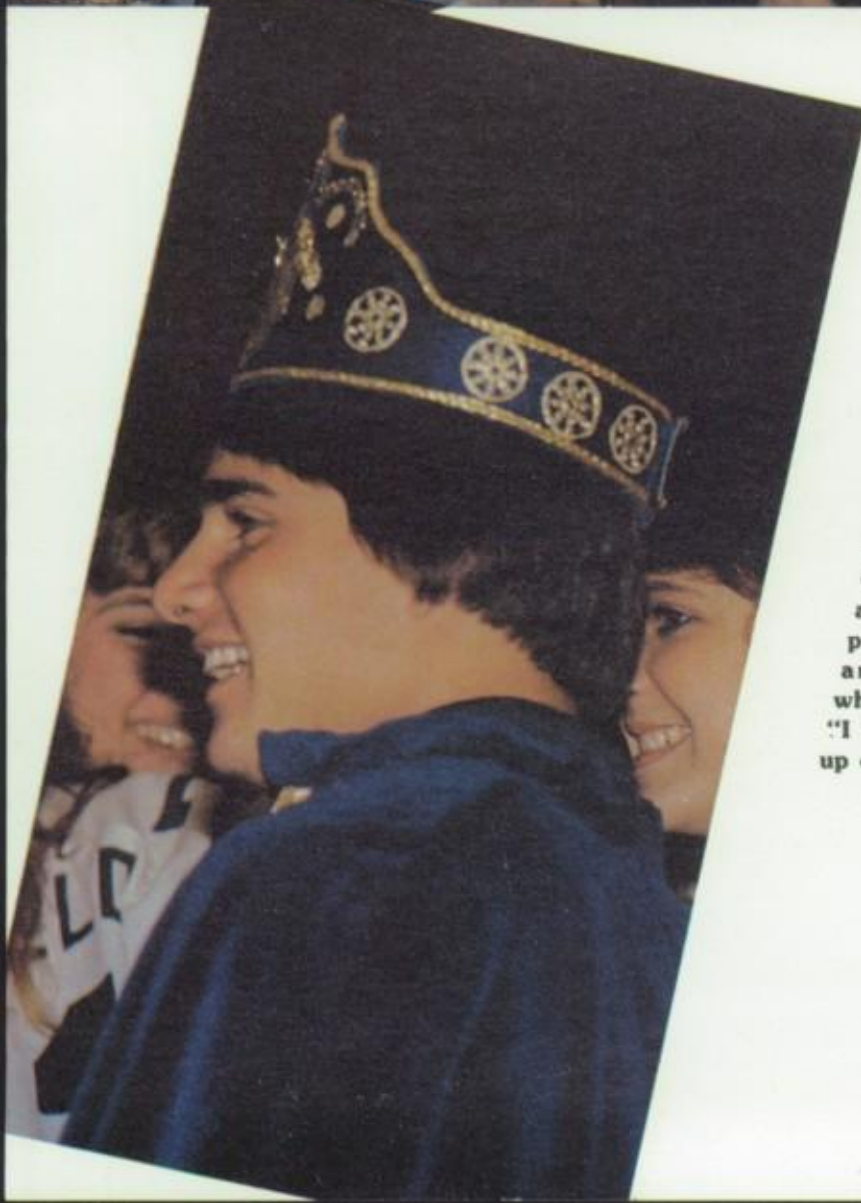

Wednesday the halls took on a colorful appearance during Deck the Halls Day. The seniors won with "Endless Summer." Said freshman Kelley Rezac: "Spirit Week was fun, but our hall was a little embarrassing."

Thursday was a busy evening that began with the motorcade. Many decorated cars paraded down Turney Rd. with the sophomores' car winning first place. After the motorcade, guys and girls switched roles for the annual Powder Puff game. The seniors blew away the juniors, 24-6.

Seniors also won the spirit link competition.

Where were you August 10 of summer vacation from 7 to 9 a.m.? Probably sleeping, unless you were a member of the Bulldog soccer team. The guys were out bright and early to practice running and work on skills such as kicking, controlling, and passing the ball. "We should have worked more on running," commented Coach Whitelock. "We did well the first half of the game, but by the second half we were too tired and we'd get blown away."

"The game against Lakewood was the best of the season," remarked Donna Mollica, a faithful soccer spectator. The Bulldogs tied the game 3-3 with goals scored by Dave Latarski, Ed Rolko, and Brian Nenadal. An outstanding performance was given by goalie Jim Walchanowicz who had 27 saves and assisted with a goal. "Jim has a good working knowledge of the game. He's the nucleus of the team," said the coach.

The soccer team didn't have many fans to cheer them on and as Dave Latarski put it, "Little determination and lack of fan support spoiled what could have been a promising season." Even though the fan support was low, the Bulldogs managed to tie three of their games, ending the season with a 0-11-3 record.

Mark D'Agostino described this year's team of 9 seniors, 10 juniors, 4 sophomores, and 5 freshmen by saying, "We were optimistic all year long." Senior Jim Rawlins added, "We had talent, but by the time we got it all together, the season was just about over."

Coach Whitelock believed that the team's major problem this year was lack of confidence, but considering the talent and youth of the team, he is determined to have a stronger team next year.

BREAKING TRADITION

Just when you're getting tired of the same old routine, isn't it great to have something like a six-foot Frankenstein walk into your English class, followed by a pair of killer bees?

Halloween was one event which took the word "tradition" out of the dress code and spread fun through the hallways. In many ways this year, Garfield students broke tradition.

The happiest "tradition-breaking" came last June when voters in Garfield Heights finally passed the school levy. The victory came after an exhausting student-run campaign and allowed students to begin picking up the pieces of their school life.

The 1983-84 school year brought with it a variety of traditions—and some were broken. Tennis was in danger of being dropped from the varsity sport list; the football team suffered the first winless season in Garfield history; the last week of school brought a new final exam schedule. The yearbook staff threw tradition out of the window and completely redesigned the Garfield yearbook, no doubt causing some confusion, some bewilderment, some questions—but an attractive change of pace as well.

Breaking tradition meant changes—for better or for worse.

Strange people

Lions and tigers and bears, oh my! "Dress-up day gives me the chance to be creative," remarked Lion Lisa Pinto. "I enjoyed the challenge of trying to come up with an original costume."

The day was October 31, Halloween, and the time—well, it was the time for students and faculty to let their imaginations run wild, show their spirit, and dress just about any way they wanted to.

Many "things" infested our school on Halloween. While strolling through the halls, students saw their otherwise normal friends dressed as lions, tigers, bears, gumball machines, grapes, and even a laundry basket.

Punk seemed to be the "in" thing this Halloween as many students looked like they washed their hair with any color paint they could find. Lesley Borgan said, "It was really exciting to dress wild-and-crazy to portray something different and unusual."

Like most things that go on within our school, spirits rose and Halloween dress-up day was a big success. Many students, freshmen through seniors, broke the tradition of wearing their good old jeans, t-shirts, sweaters, and preppy clothes to put a strange look to their wardrobes and add a little extra fun to the day.

Net results improved

Tennis anyone? Although the past couple of years have been a struggle for the tennis team, the 1983 team came out swinging with devotion.

The number one singles player, Michael Douglas, commented, "Last year was one of the best teams we've had." Fine performances on the court came from Dale Chmielewski, Andy Cvitkovich, Rob Davis, Darrin Kotecki, Chaz Kriak, and Rick Torgerson, all 1983 graduates.

Working hard under the direction of Coach Schelien, team members showed a lot of individual talent and progress. Together as a team, the Bulldog racquet club compiled a record of four wins and eight losses. According to Mr. Schelien, "The team did very well, even though we played some tough schools."

A big disadvantage to the Bulldogs is while schools they play against have tennis teams starting at the junior high level, Garfield doesn't start a team until the senior high level.

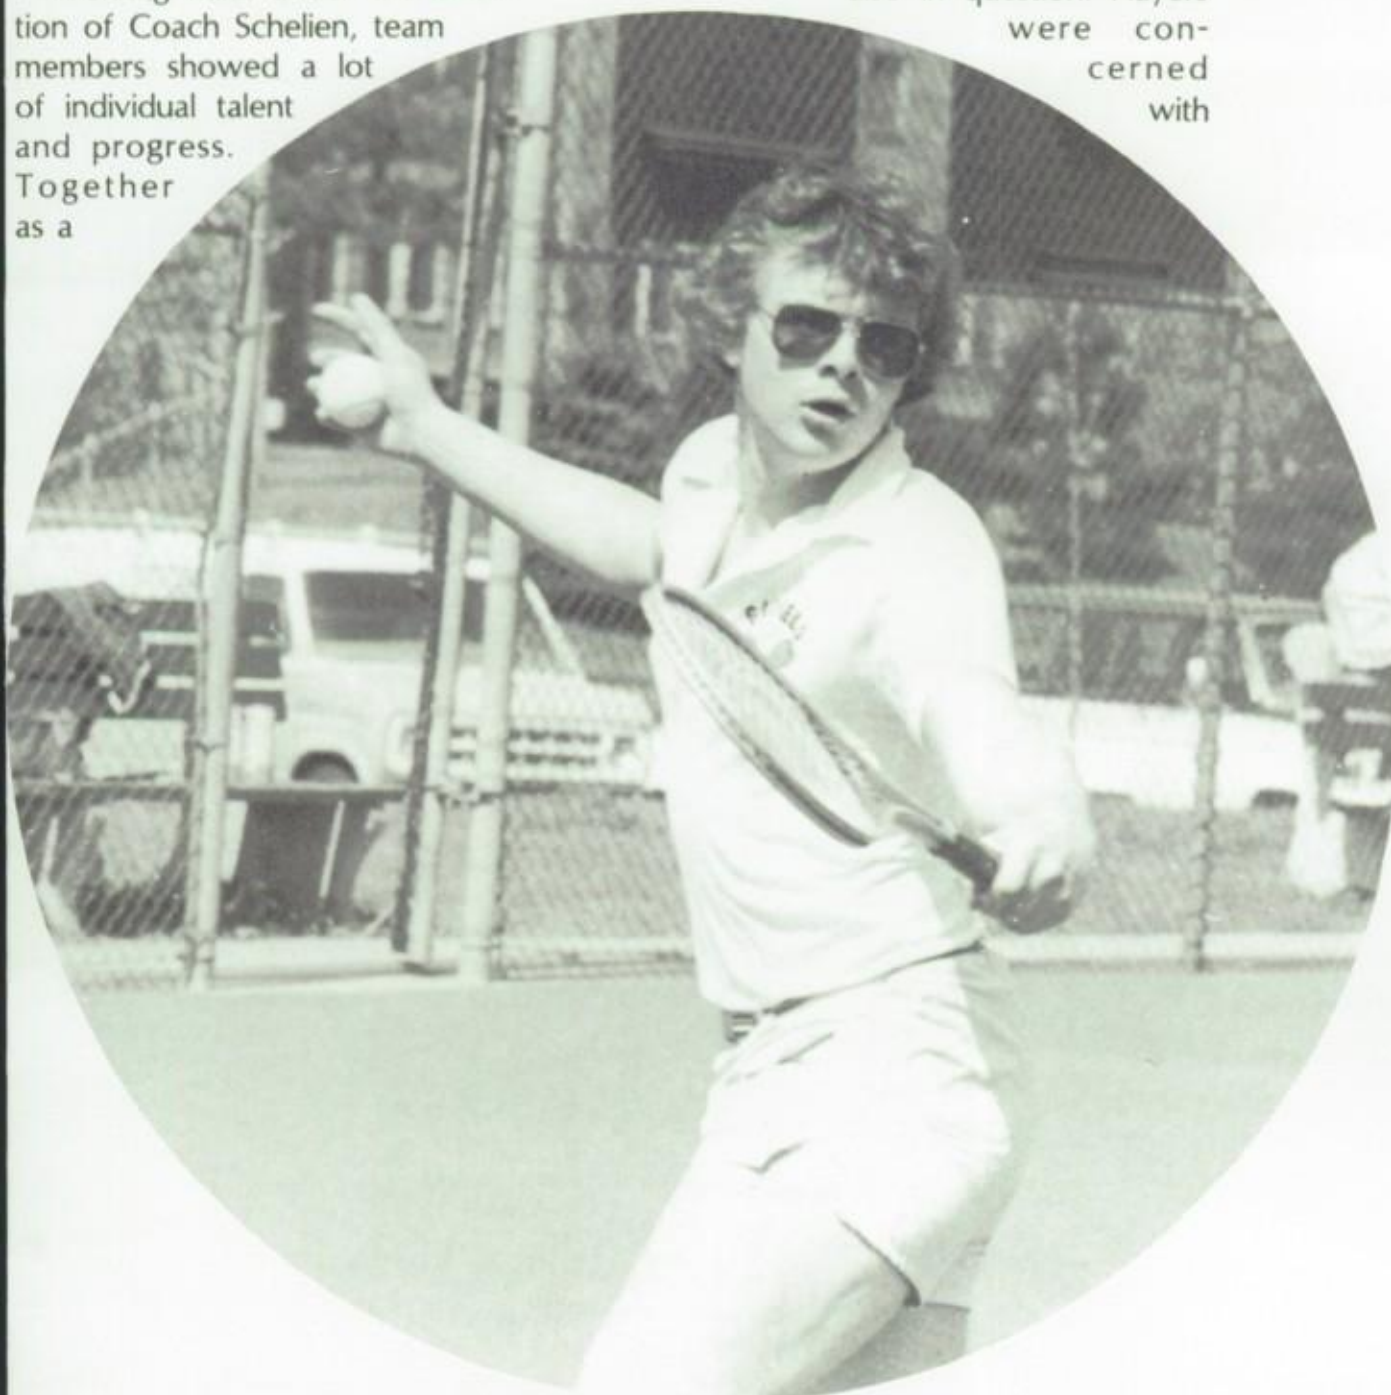

The future of the tennis team was also in question. Players were concerned with plans to cut this year's team from the varsity sports roster.

So while our Bulldog racquet club wonders about its future, many are trying to sharpen their individual performances. "Whether there will be a team or not," said Michael Douglas, "I'm going to prepare myself far better than I have in the past."

New look

Yearbook staff shattered tradition to produce "Picking Up the Pieces"

Once upon a time in our sleepy little high school, the serene stillness was shattered by the strangled cries of Mr. Jambor, alias Mr. Bill, alias the yearbook advisor, after learning another photographer had opened the camera without rewinding the film. But as the saying goes, "it never rains, it pours." Mr. Barbour, the ICP representative, was expected later that day to check the pages due for a deadline (which happened to be missing captions and still had to be proofread by Mr. Jambor). But, as always, teamwork and esprit de corps paid off for the staff.

Last summer, key staff members Renee Palshook, Sue Perkins, Lisa Skerl, Diane Perchinske, and Chris Austin travelled to a little city called Oberlin for the annual ICP yearbook seminar. As they all were being given important information on their respective duties, they slowly began "picking up the pieces." When it came time to choose a theme, several great ideas were passed around: Lite Yearbook from Garfield, Flashbook, and the Mr. Bill Memorial Yearbook. Finally they decided on "Picking Up the Pieces."

For the past three years the Garfield Heights yearbook has won many awards. Last year First Impressions won the Buckeye Award, the Great Lakes Interscholastic Press Association's highest honor. This year's staff worked hard to continue that tradition by breaking a few traditions of yearbooks gone by, led by the design ideas of editor Renee Palshook.

In the end, the staff was able to "pick up the pieces" and pass the torch of memories on to future classes.

Academics

You don't have to be in a classroom to expand your horizons and learn

Although "academics" is usually something most people relate to a classroom, there are opportunities for students to study and learn outside of class. At Garfield Heights High, many students took advantage of such opportunities.

Juniors have the chance, for instance, to participate each spring in National History Day. This program encourages students to explore an historical subject related to a yearly theme. Students in participating states submit their entries in contests and are judged by historians, educators, and other experienced professionals in related fields. Last spring, Stan Rapiey and Dave Foley won first place in the district and state competition with a project on Gutenberg and movable type. They travelled to Washington, D.C., and finished third in the nation last summer.

Another opportunity for outside-the-classroom learning is the Junior Council on World Affairs. Members selected countries and researched their cultures and people. They wrote papers and held discussions and then eventually took a trip down to Cleveland State where they participated with other schools in a model United Nations.

"You meet a lot of people from other schools," said JCWA president Stan Rapiey. "You have to compromise and learn to work together." JCWA, as well as History Day, is sponsored by Mrs. Daugherty.

Between the various activities held outside the classroom and the variety of people who visit students at the high school—this year featured a ballet dancer and a bullfighter among others—academics covers a wide range of interests at Garfield High.

BACK TO BUSINESS

SCHOOL ACTIVITIES were back in business in 1983-84. In the photos below, Dave McIntyre casts his vote at JCWA's Model United Nations; Lisa Pinto gets made up for the school play; yearbook staffers Steve Romak, Amy Rawlins, Lisa Kaliszewski, and Melinda Corpus mail letters to parents to promote book sales; varsity cheerleaders Darlene Shutty, Sharon Huml, Tracey Schors, and Annette Twingstrom practice in the gym lobby; and Mr. Shively prepares the marching band for football season. Photos by John Orland, Lisa Skerl, Glenn Jambor, and Chris Austin.

Passing the school levy earned Garfield students a new lease on life. As school started in August, it was back to business in the classroom, after school, and at special activities.

MIXED ENSEMBLE was back in business, too. During first period Cindy Gartner, Cheryl Blatnik, Mary Sutyak, and Misty Geraci learn a new routine. Photo by Chris Austin.

While last year consisted of long hours of busy work to keep the school system a good one, this year was not a time to sit back. Students worked hard to pass the school levy and after their work paid off, they once again got down to business. The new school year did bring some new changes, and students put special efforts forth to make this year as good as any other.

As always, Student Senate was one particular group that really got down to business. They sponsored dances and took an active part in several spirited activities throughout the year. In the bustle of getting back to business, many students lent a helping hand in the role of teacher's secretaries, lab assistants, or office pages. Getting back to business was also the theme for athletics. Such sports as basketball and hockey required the usual doses of devotion from those who joined the teams.

Winning back their school system, complete with extra-curricular activities, meant it could not be a time to slack off for Garfield students. In classrooms all day long, after school at practice sessions, and throughout the year at special events, it was time to get back to business.

By Renee Palshook

Lending a helping hand

Let's face it: teachers are human, too, and their schedules are just as busy if not busier than any of ours. So why wouldn't they accept the help that many students were willing to give?

Various secretaries throughout the school didn't hold a 9-to-5 job, but they willingly gave up their study halls as well as time before and after school, proving to be a big help. Senior Renee Mankovich enjoyed lending a helping hand. "I was a teacher's secretary for Mr. Martin and Mrs. Holm. It was almost like being a teacher. There were always papers waiting for you to grade, or grades that had to be recorded."

Students also helped out in the general, guidance, and attendance offices, and in the library and athletic office.

There were also students who strayed away from the secretarial position. Lab assistants were a big help to both science teachers and confused students. Audio visual aids added their share of help. They distributed, collected, and fixed equipment that gave us a break from the teacher's daily lectures.

Another group of student helpers with a completely different job was the group who helped on Blood Day.

Their duties ranged from taking temperatures to storing the donated blood.

But in addition to helping out the teachers, many students were actually helping themselves as well. Who knows? Maybe one day lab assistant Tammy Majors will be a famous doctor with Blood Day helper Lynette Sobocinski as her nurse. Or possibly audio visual assistant Mike Flis will film the most famous movie ever.

But fact or fiction, these student helpers were a big service to all.

This is a little ditty about Bulldog ball, as seasons passed, both winter and fall. The story was filled with hopeful news and the parade of Nike shoes.

The tale begins with varsity's first three victories. They were important wins against local rivals. Rodney Budzowski felt the season was a success because, "we had five guys that could score as a team." The Bulldogs had a higher scoring average than last year. Todd Parsons was the most improved player and Lineal El-Amin became the inspiration to the team. Fine shows were also given by seniors Sam Freeman, Tony Conway, and junior Scott Asche. The team was coached by Mr. Geiser.

Junior varsity's prime talent was shown in the first game against Bedford. The players all enjoyed the season, except for sophomore Scott Zabak. He couldn't finish the season because of an injury but was considered the "sixth man." Mr. Gallupe gave the JV's direction for a consistent effort.

Lastly, the ditty ends with freshman ball. The highlight of their season was against Normandy. The team averaged forty points a game. With Mr. Sledz as the coach, the freshmen gained the chance to play high school basketball.

Senate helped Garfield get

As Garfield Heights High got back to business after a year of apprehension about the school levy, one organization found itself in the thick of things—as usual. Student Senate, composed of representatives of all four grade levels, spent a busy year planning, organizing, and running a number of events which made life at the high school much more enjoyable. Perhaps more than anyone else, Student Senate was really “back in business.”

Student Senate: setting the pace

Taking charge of student activities proved to be exciting and challenging for Student Senate. This year, with Mrs. Seese in her sixth year as advisor, Darlene Shutty as president, Brenda Walker as vice president, Lisa Bornino as secretary, and Bonnie Kudelski as treasurer, student life was more versatile than ever.

Student Senate livened up the school year with events such as Spirit Week and Challenge Week. Students got the opportunity to compete against faculty and other classes in unusual competitions. The mix of pep rallies and assemblies gave students a chance to survey the sports scene.

Senate's displays of photos and posters made the school aware of extra-curricular activities. In addition, there were other serious projects. Senate raised money for the cancer society by selling daffodils and participated in charity drives. Conducting the Golden Agers Tea was another activity.

Senate members had a positive feeling about their work. Darlene Shutty enjoyed it because "it gave me an opportunity to do nice things." Mrs. Seese enjoyed "working with the kids." And Sharon Huml really liked "being involved in all the school activities, especially the dances."

A FACE-OFF gets the action underway at the rec center in a game between Garfield Heights and University School.

No beef

Tough division thwarted season's hopes, but young players provided promise

Face-off, checking, penalty, icing: these were a few of the terms heard during the winter season of Garfield Heights hockey.

Although the Bulldogs played in the eastern division of the Greater Cleveland Hockey League, which was the toughest, the team managed to pull out four victories against 12 losses during the 1983-84 season. The icers defeated Valley Forge, Lakewood, Normandy, and St. Joseph.

One of the main reasons the team didn't do as well as they wanted to was, as faculty sponsor Mr. Sullivan put it, "We had no beef!" He added, "The team needed more confidence in themselves, too."

The team also had its strong points. The Bulldogs were blessed with three outstanding freshmen: Brian Nenadal, Joe Zidlicky, and goalie Todd Clark. Chris Wilk, Mike Lange, Dan Lange and senior Ed Sas were also noted for their ability and knowledge of the game.

The icers got a lot of support from a group of hockey statisticians. Besides keeping statistics, they promoted spirit and publicized the games.

Teachers are unique—hard to describe. Each is especially different in his own way. So our yearbook staff wanted to show some examples of the individuality that makes our faculty special. The teachers featured here, along with all the rest, helped students pick up the pieces and set guidelines for the future.

A good education is the result of Good Teachers

"Every day is a different situation," claimed Mr. Palumbo of the math department. Along with his annual dedication to "Santa Bird," Mr. Palumbo loves using colored chalk. "I like teaching because of my students," he said.

Over in social studies, rather than keeping history ancient, Mrs. Daugherty kept it alive. She enjoys high school students because "they bring insight" to history. Mrs. Daugherty also was the faculty sponsor of NHS, JCWA, and Blood Day.

English teacher Mrs. Jablonski said she really enjoys her work and her students. Because she is department head, she is usually very busy. During spring vacation she usually accompanies interested seniors on a European trip.

The unpredictable science teachers, Ms. Hofman and Mr. Caruso, both like working with their students. But while Ms. Hofman likes to take a two-hour nap after coming home from school, Mr. Caruso prefers to eat. However they do have two similar activities: sharing levy committees and turning Mr. Rose's hair gray.

If these teachers could go anywhere in the world for a vacation, Mr. Palumbo would choose Florida to see relatives; Mrs. Daugherty, Alaska, since "it's the last untouched wilderness;" Mrs. Jablonski would like to visit ancient ruins in Japan; Ms. Hofman selected El Salvador to help people she normally wouldn't be able to; and Mr. Caruso took Italy to meet his wife's relatives.

GIVE YOURSELF SOME CREDIT

After students realized that their hard work and dedication had helped pass the vital school levy, they were able to sit back and give themselves some credit.

The school board and superintendent of schools, Dr. James Harper, helped give that credit when they called off the students' last day of school in June as a "thank you" gesture.

But there were plenty of other reasons beside the victorious levy campaign to hand out credit to students. After hard work and dedication, nothing is better than the recognition that comes from successful efforts. Several students deserved to give themselves a pat on the back for their achievements in several areas.

The National Honor Society was one proof of how the achievements of students academically shone brightly. Being able to attain a 3.5 average through four high school years was a challenge that was rewarded by the induction into NHS. Being named to the top ten of the senior class was also an honorable achievement that deserved recognition.

Giving credit wasn't limited to academics, though. Sports such as volleyball received several honorable mentions. This was the first in many seasons the team didn't close its season with a losing record. The team won respect from not only the school but also from other coaches in the LEL.

And the class of '83 was able to take credit for winning last spring's Challenge Week, although many individuals from the faculty and all classes found success in the various events.

Throughout the year there were many reasons to give yourself some credit.

Credit them with success

They've got it made

Sure school isn't all fun and games. But let's be realistic. Sometimes there comes a time when a student has to buckle down and set aside the fun until the work is done. So it's only appropriate to give due credit where credit is due.

The National Honor Society definitely deserves credit! Under the leadership of President Judy Mendek, Vice President David Foley, Secretary Jeff Riha, Treasurer Carla DeSciscio, and teacher sponsor Ms. Daugherty, NHS was very active.

To be a member of NHS students needed a 3.4 average and have had participated at least four school services or activities. This year's banquet was held at Fisherman's Wharf in May of 1983.

The two main events NHS was noted for sponsoring were the homecoming dance and a Christmas Party for faculty members and their families. All members got involved and made everything they set out to do a big success.

But NHS members weren't the only people with accomplishments. The halls of G.H.H.S. were full of student success. Everything from honor roll to roles in plays and officers of organizations, to winning history day, left a lot to boast about. Who knows, maybe the list of Garfield's great graduates will turn out a future U.S. President or Einstein!

Along with games they

Another season brought the Lady Bulldog volleyball team to an improved record of 10-11.

In the beginning of the season, the varsity players showed their greatest potential. Then, during the course of a few months, they all made individual improvements. That was brought out in their games because not one ended up with a wide margin. Near the end of the season, varsity picked up some important wins. They had defeated both Parma and Valley Forge, which hadn't happened for eight years. However, in the sectionals against Regina, the team was shocked by their unexpected loss.

"The game I will never forget is the game against Trinity," remembered senior Pam Ristau. "We had the best spirit for that game. If we had had that kind of spirit for the rest of the season, I think we would have gone to Columbus."

The junior varsity had a most trying season. Again this year they had no coach until near the end of the season. Their final record was 2-18. Even so, the players displayed great capability; many got the experience they would need for future seasons.

Coaches and players took a positive outlook on the season. Varsity coach Mr. Arnold said, "The team matured well. I predict the varsity will win the conference next year." This year's team had only three seniors; the rest were juniors. Juniors Kim Kidwell, Jane Ciricola, and Karen Torgerson agreed. "We had fun this year, but next year we will dominate."

"The JV team was glad to have a coach," said Ms. Buckley, who came in time to coach the girls to a victory over Shaw. "We got experience," said Cindy Thompson, "and that's the purpose of JV's."

Credit in the classroom

As Garfield students were busy earning their credits toward graduation, many could also accept congratulations for jobs well done. In the classroom as well as in other school activities, students could pat themselves on the back and give themselves some credit.

Some classroom routines were well-known and practiced by almost everyone: book reports in English class, homework in math, out in the hall for that make-up test. But there were other aspects of classroom routine which were not so regular.

Students livened up oral presentations by bringing in things such as drum sets, photo collections, and machines. And teachers often broke the routine with a guest speaker or even a guest computer once in a while. Mr. Harrison was one teacher who always had an expert on hand in his health classes.

Field trips took students to educational experiences the classroom couldn't give. Plant ecology students visited Holden Arboretum while English students traveled to the Cleveland Play House.

When it came time for papers, projects, or tests, some students just didn't make the grade. But most of them discovered that putting in a little effort went a long way, and when all was said and done they were able to give themselves the credit they deserved.

Accepting the challenge

As the year goes on, many students often find themselves falling into the same old school routine day after day, week after week. But here at Garfield Heights High School there are many not-so-routine activities that take place throughout the year. One of these is Challenge Week. "It was really a lot of fun," was the common comment used by Paul Dunn and many other students who described this unique week.

The fifth annual Challenge Week began May 16, 1983, and ended May 20 with the class of '83 winning the overall competition. But what happened throughout the week was an all-around good time.

Challenge Week was organized by Student Senate. "It was great to see so many people, both students and faculty, participating and having a good time," said Darlene Shutty, president of Student Senate.

Just about every John Smith and Jane Doe found something to participate in. Sweatsuit day, hat day, and blue-and-gold day were among the most popular. However, the more daring put on poodle skirts, bobby socks, and slicked their hair back for Fifties Day, while the most daring set aside their Saks Fifth Avenue wardrobe, stepped out of Vogue, and displayed their great ability to look totally clashing as they participated in the newly-added mis-match day.

There were also things going on Monday through Thursday after school. Dennis Hudak said, "It was outrageous to watch and participate in all the fun." Freshmen, faculty, and everyone in between gave his best shot at volleyball, basketball, whiffle ball (which replaced softball due to rain), and the outdoor olympics.

But as usual, the Anything Goes assembly was the all-time favorite. Take the balloon break, for example. Though Mr. Minor was good, the competition was stiff, and he wound up "busted." Even though the faculty once again managed to get the biggest tricycle, the competition was close, and in the end, everyone who participated deserved credit for adding some fun and crazy times to the school year.

KATHY GARSKIE, the number two student, is a member of Choir Council and enjoys writing poems, eating and swimming. After graduation she will go on to study optometry at Ohio State.

THIRD-RANKED student David Foley will probably major in biology. He wants to study pre-med and become a general practitioner. In his spare time he enjoys reading, playing the violin, and listening to records.

STAN RAPIEY, number four student, enjoys movies and television. After high school he plans to go to Ohio State to major in chemistry and become a dentist.

NUMBER SIX student Tammy Majors is very active in Student Senate, as a majorette, and as a Mirror editor, just to name a few. She will probably go on to Case Western Reserve to become a doctor.

DURING HER SENIOR year, Joann Filipski was band librarian and worked at the bloodmobile. The number five student will study nursing at St. Alexis Hospital.

PATTI SUHOZA, the number seven student, plans to study nursing, possibly at Kent. Her interests and activities include Flag Corps, choir, music, and tennis.

Top ten set the pace

Reading, writing, and 'rithmetic; studying and even cramming: sometimes they can all make you sick! Is it all really worth it? In the long run, it sure is. Especially for those who spent their high school days making every point count in order to go to the head of the class and make the top ten.

Number one student Brenda Walker (pictured at left) amazes many with her long list of talents and activities. While keeping a 4.2 average, she still found time to be captain of the girls varsity basketball team, vice president of Student Senate, band treasurer, Mirror editor, and a member of NHS and the varsity volleyball team. Brenda also enjoys bicycling, reading, and composing music, but saves these hobbies for the summer due to a lack of time.

After graduation Brenda hopes to attend Harvard University and study engineering.

Brenda will always recall her high school teachers. She commented, "Most of the teachers I've had were excellent in their fields, and it was with their help that I was able to achieve so much."

By Sue Perkins

THE ARMY is for number eight student Judy Mendek. In school Judy was NHS president, a wrestling manager, and involved in JCWA and the bloodmobile. Judy hopes to be a paratrooper in the army.

IN THE NUMBER NINE spot is Carla DeSciscio. She will go to John Carroll University to major in business and then maybe someday law school.

ROUNDING OFF the top ten is Angela Ciuni. Angie also will attend John Carroll but as an accounting major. She has much involvement in a group called accounting explorers.

Class of '84 selected 'senior favorites' and

Ideal Seniors

In January seniors continued a Garfield tradition by voting for "Ideal Seniors" and "Senior Favorites."

Phil Collins summed up the feeling of many who felt the pressures of being a senior as "I Don't Care Anymore" was voted the class song.

The dandelion (actually a weed) finished a distant second as the ever-popular rose won class flower.

Richard Gere, who gained fame in "An Officer and a Gentleman" and "Breathless," won favorite actor.

Debra Winter tied with Meryl Streep as favorite actress.

Michael Jackson certainly made a name for himself as his top-selling album "Thriller" won him an unprecedented eight honors in the American Music Awards. He also captured the senior poll, edging Robert Plant and Bryan Adams as favorite male vocalist. Pat Benatar beat out Stevie Nicks as favorite female vocalist.

Eddie Murphy won favorite comedian; Def Leppard sneaked by Genesis and Journey as favorite group; and Flashdance won favorite movie.

Cheers topped the cultish David Letterman as favorite TV show, and the Buzzard still ruled as WMMS ran away with favorite radio station.

As for "Ideal Seniors"—they are pictured here and on the following two pages.

An Original Point of View

Though the biggest pieces of the school year were the traditional activities such as the musical, the play, Christmas parties, or sports events such as baseball, this year was unique and we were able to take an original point of view of these common customs.

Those students who share or participated in these activities know that it took unique people to make ordinary events into wonderful experiences for everyone. Although football and basketball games may have seemed boring or repetitious to casual observers, knowing that your friends were on the team or on the sideline cheering helped make those games special. The musical was not just another production because you knew the actors and actresses on stage.

In these and many other ways, Garfield Heights students were able to take the ordinary activities of school life and transform them into a different kind of experience.

Cheerleading is one way to express your original point of view, but especially at the junior varsity level. JV squad members Renee Jarema, Amy Rawlins, Barb Polak, Gina Flama, Laurel Cywinski, and Loren Krosky cheered to near-empty gyms and deserted bleachers, missing much of the glamour of varsity sports but none of the hard work. Not only that, but it was windy on photo day!

"Once Upon a Mattress" came off without a hitch last April 21, 22, and 23. The lines were down and when the curtain opened, the musical was spectacular. The king, though, when asked about the performance, was speechless.

Lora Buckley, Chuck Keshock, Darlene Pido, Jim Walchanowicz, Michelle Bellomo, and Matt Derwis displayed both fine musical and acting abilities in their lead roles.

As for this winter's production of "The Egg and I," lead character Jim Walchanowicz exclaimed, "It was Lizzie Borden all over again!" Not intentionally, of course. During a performance for middle school students, Mary Siciliano accidentally hammered Jim with—a hammer. The show went on, concussion or not, and the cast put on a great show for the public February 3 and 4.

"The Egg and I" featured the trials and tribulations of the MacDonald family, a bunch of city slickers trying to make it in the country egg business. Lead roles were also played by Melissa Wargo, Mary Siciliano, Mary Sutyak, and Bill Janiak. "The comedy was not direct," said Walchanowicz, "but rather in the interpretation and delivery of lines."

This spring the drama and music departments presented "The Music Man."

Vocational students had their own original point of view

10:20: the bell rang. While most students went to their next class, those going to the Joint Vocational School headed for the bus, hoping to get a good seat. The bus took them to the JVS lunch room. Next it was 11:55 and time to get to class. First stop was the medical secretary room. In this room were Michelle Stokowski and Carolyn Beige, learning the medical field, forms, secretarial office procedures, business correspondence, and English and math skills.

Debbie Zuchowski and Renee Feckner were in dental assisting. "It's a lot of fun," said Debbie. "The teacher is very friendly and understanding." Students made molds of teeth and learned how to use instruments.

Throughout the JVS, other Garfield students were busy at their various career-oriented classes. Heidi Ferrence was in cosmetology, cutting, perming, and coloring hair. Sandy Losse of commercial foods worked in the school restaurant, the Valley Inn. There she learned the various jobs of a restaurant. In data processing Kimm Gunn looked forward to "shadowing"—actually going on the job for a time without being paid.

There were over 900 students at the JVS, and nearly 200 of them were from Garfield. The school, which opened in 1971, has seen many improvements, including updated machinery and computers. Junior Mike Dombrowski, president of the JVS executive council, said the school does more than train students: "It helps the community."

On the sidelines

Sure the teams were usually the center of attention. But what about all the people on the sidelines? These people brought an original point of view to athletics at Garfield.

The marching band performed at halftime of football games, but a lot of practice went into their shows. Majorettes went to Hiram College for five days last summer and prepared for the season over the summer months. Band camp was held here at the high school for two weeks before school started. New members worked on the field for the first week and were joined by returning members the second.

Every team had managers and statisticians who helped the teams greatly. For example, wrestling managers had many duties, according to Sue Honigman. "We had to mop the mats each time they were used," she said. They also went to the matches and tournaments to keep score, called them into the newspaper, and kept water bottles filled.

And what's the sidelines without the cheerleaders? "We worked during the summer and two times a week during school," said Gina Flama of the JV squad. The girls worked on both old and new cheers in order to be prepared for games. Working together gave them the chance to get to know each other. "It takes a lot of dedication and hard work," said Amy Rawlins, "but it's also fun and rewarding in the long run."

In reality, there was more to sporting events than just the players. After all, if the going got tough, they could always look for support from the guys and girls on the sidelines.

Bulldog baseball

Great expectations
faced harsh reality

At the start of the 1983 season, expectations were high for both the varsity and JV baseball teams. Both teams had the pitching and hitting needed to capture their respective Lake Erie League titles. The junior varsity started fast, living up to expectations by sweeping their first four games. But Parma brought the Bulldogs back down to earth with a 15-7 beating which started a six-game losing streak. They finally picked themselves up and ended the season on a high note, winning their last three games. The JV squad finished at 7-6 with a .321 team batting average. Stars were Mark D'Agostino, Scott Asche, Bill Guttermuth, Mike Pollack, and Doug Schrader.

The varsity season was a disappointing one as a whole. According to Coach Mather, "The team never fully reached its potential." However, the varsity was characterized by solid hitting—a team batting average of over .300. Weak pitching was the problem early on. It gave way to improvement late in the season, but too late to make much difference. "Our offense was never really in unison with our defense," commented Joe Janiak. "We also lacked self-discipline. I felt we were never really mentally prepared for a game."

The varsity had a final record of 6-12 and was 4-10 in the LEL. The Garfield hitting attack was led by all-conference players Janiak and Scott Kitson. Janiak was selected to the East-West All-Stars and as an alternate to the all-state team.

Despite the somewhat dismal season, the Bulldogs uncovered a few diamonds in the rough for the future. Bright spots were pitcher-outfielder Gary Vidovic, who stepped in and started every game except one and did a commendable job at bat and in the field, and Joe Gabriele, who pitched for the varsity and compiled the team's lowest earned run average. Scott Asche had double duty, splitting his time with the JV's. Chris Monaco and Rob Sigmund also took part in the '83 campaign for the varsity.

As the new season approached, the Bulldogs once more looked forward to being contenders.

After all, we're just a bunch of KIDS

Screaming babies and mischievous brats sometimes come to mind when a high school student thinks of younger children. But believe it or not, one day the greater majority of us will have one, two, or possibly a whole tribe of siblings. So why not get a head start on experience with kids? Many Garfield students had that chance and ended up with fun and memorable experiences.

Last spring 12 seniors and 10 juniors returned to Centerville Mills sixth grade camp, this time as counselors. Throughout the week they helped middle school teachers supervise the kids. They slept in cabins, accompanied nature hikes, fished, and had a bonfire.

Then on December 16, National Honor Society members held their annual Christmas party for the faculty and their children up to 10 years of age.

"Everyone seems to enjoy the party. It gives the students a chance to see teachers in the roles of parents," commented NHS sponsor Mrs. Daugherty.

Members supplied refreshments and games for everyone, sang Christmas carols, and presented a skit. Even Santa, played by Scott Shubert, joined the fun and distributed presents to all of his young guests.

AHEAD

As time passes, every experience we encounter helps lead us into a direction of upward growth, not only physically but also mentally and socially.

This school year several incidents pointed us in a direction which helped us step ahead into modern times.

Keeping up with the age of computers and new technology, students learned to use the new Apple computer provided in the counselors' office to help choose careers, and they experienced the new wave of modern advances in classes and activities.

The arrival of 1984 certainly proved to be a big step in the direction of tomorrow.

Rebuilding

Familiar theme echoed throughout track and cross country seasons

For many teams at Garfield, 1983 was a rebuilding year, and cross country, a fall sport which consists of running 5000 meters (3.1 miles), was no exception. Both the boys and girls teams were coached by Mr. McNulty.

Lacking experience—there were only three seniors running—the guys compiled 8 wins and 53 losses while the girls ended up with 7 wins and 41 losses.

Through rain and snow last spring, the track team gave its best effort, too. However, the outcome wasn't what coaches Bauman and Gallupe expected. Although they only had one win, their effort and determination gave other teams a tough battle. With few seniors, underclassmen had to pull in the points.

Two team leaders were Ron Dean in shot, disc, and 400-meter relay, and Dan Mendolera running high and low hurdles, 400-meter relay, and long jump. Dean won the MVP award.

The season's highlight was the LEL invitational where most team members seemed to run their best ever.

For the upcoming season, Coach Gallupe said, "We will be greatly improved if the people come back."

The freshman team had only one win but seemed to be a promising group. Coach Purnell noted, "We have some good, hard-working eighth graders coming up."

Stepping into music

Sing out! And that's what Mixed Ensemble did this year, performing for schools, nursing homes, hospitals, and many others. The 22 singers also did a spring benefit for Muscular Dystrophy and in May traveled to New York for a competition. "As well as performing, we had the opportunity to see 'A Chorus Line' and special sights of the city," said Michelle Bellomo.

During the Christmas season, the choir sang at the Arcade downtown as well as at other Garfield schools. On March 16 they attended the LEL Choir Festival at Valley Forge, and members participated in a contest at Kirtland February 11.

Marching Band started early in August, practicing for three hours a day in the hot sun. Members had one week to learn the music and routines for halftime shows during football season.

Concert Band had a Christmas concert, a pops concert in February, and a spring concert in May. Jazz Band, practicing after school, joined the February and May performances.

Directing the musicians were Mr. Ron Jones and Mr. Mike Shively.

Was Orwell right or does Big Brother eat quiche? Welcome to the Age of Technology at Garfield High Technology is all around us. And we all started to worry when New Year's Day came into existence at 12:00:01 a.m. to start off 1984. Would Orwell's predictions become reality? Or was all the hoopla just to promote 1984 book sales? Whatever the case, Garfield Heights High School has begun its journey into the high tech 80's.

The process began with the purchase of three Apple IIe computers, their use being limited to the staff, guidance office, and to certain classes that had applicable software available. Future plans indicate the purchase of more Apples, more software for all the classes, and a basic computer course in the curriculum. This year the new computers found a home in the publications office but rotated among several classes as students were introduced to their basic operation.

Cuyahoga Valley Joint Vocational School has invested over $30,000 in new IBM data entry machines and software. The new machines eliminate the need for floppy disks because all the information is stored directly in the main computer. The JVS has also acquired the Apple IIe computers and has instituted a computer lab course.

Meeting their match

Like many other sports teams this year, the wrestling team went through a rebuilding season. Of the 20 wrestlers on varsity and JV teams, three were freshmen, 10 sophomores, four juniors, and three seniors—a very inexperienced group.

experience they compensated for with the determination to step ahead in their sport. With the team practicing every day for at least two hours after school, they gained a lot of confidence for their matches. The guys also had the opportunity to spend time at Little Bulldog wrestling on Saturdays and use their knowledge of the sport to coach younger wrestlers. Warren Johnson summed up the season by saying "Our varsity team ended up with only two seniors, but we were still able to pull off a few team victories and many individual wins."

Some talented wrestlers included Warren Johnson, Pete Olah, and Matt Marzec. The brightest star on the team was senior Marty Mone. The 6'6 heavyweight won 11 matches by pins, lost only once, and tied once. Marty was named to the Plain Dealer Dream Team.

As students gather memories from a long school year, gradually the pieces begin falling into place to form a sharper image. Visions were brought to life when the drama students and art production class worked to refine their images. Long days of rehearsal and countless hours of painting allowed these groups to perfect their art, resulting finally in a stage production—the sharper image.

In many ways, in the classroom and out of it, Garfield students found that routine work led to a sharper image. Efforts paid off for individuals and for the high school as students attempted to create a new image from the pieces left behind.

As students envision the year as a whole, filled with activity, hazy illusions and fractions of the memories scatter in their minds. But a single incident suddenly brings everything into sharp focus. What once seemed like a bits of unrelated pieces is now a sharper image.

Talents of tomorrow

Helping shape a sharper image of Garfield Heights High were two classes which didn't follow the basic academic routine. These people were involved in art production and drama production, and they created things that others could not.

The first period art production class was always busy making posters and signs for the school, scenery for the play and musical, decorations for dances, and bulletin board displays for the main lobby. At the same time these young artists worked to improve their talents.

Drama students, who also met first period, worked on their ability to talk in front of an audience and develop special characterizations. The class produced skits and performed at the elementary schools.

Together, these two artistic groups helped to create a sharper image at the high school.

An Evening in the Orient

February 11 seniors escaped to an "Evening in the Orient," but they didn't go to China, Japan, or even Hong Kong. The Class of '84 put on their dancing shoes and attended the traditional Senior Dance.

Some seniors came early Saturday morning to help decorate the cafeteria to fit the theme. But it wasn't until after the dance began at 8 p.m. when the finishing touches of smiles, friends, and good times were added.

P.F. Flyer provided entertainment and kept the dance floor crowded. When the clock struck 11, seniors locked away another set of special memories.

KEEPING FIT, HAVING FUN

Some students maintained a "sharp image" by participating in sports outside the competitive school program.

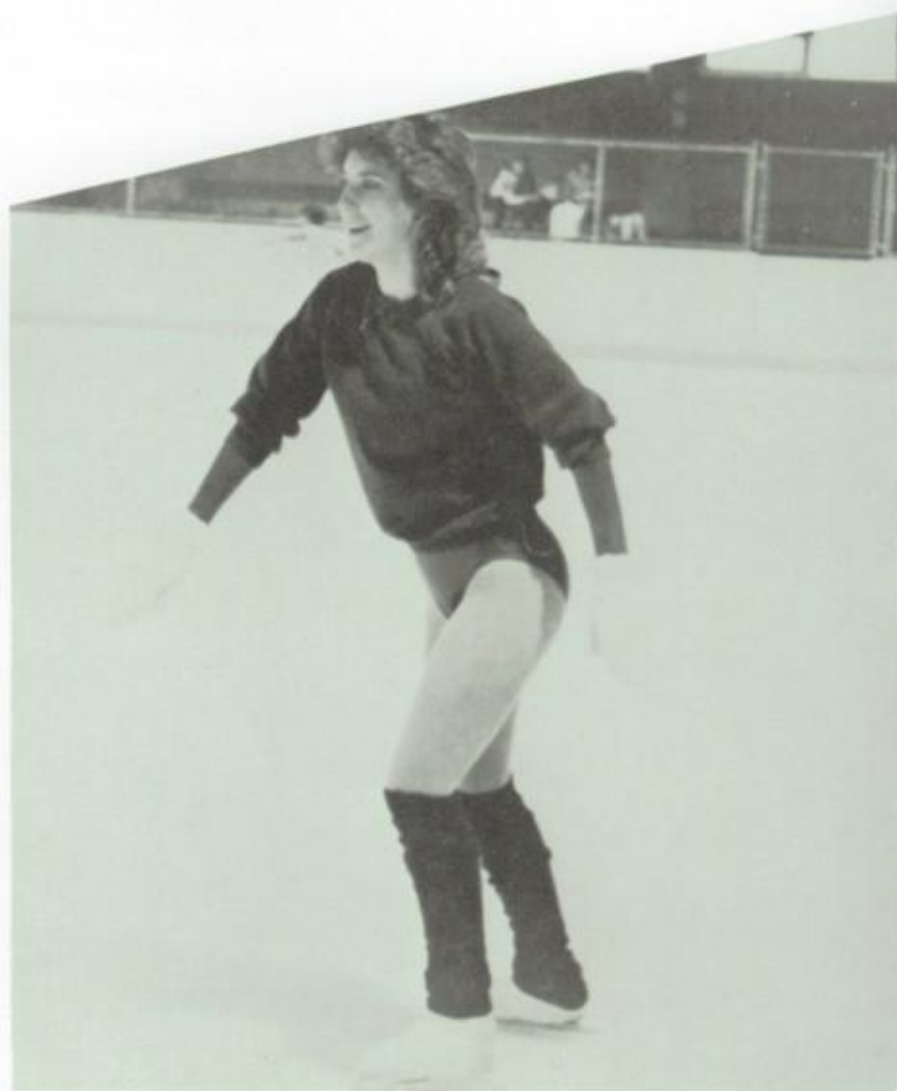

Junior Bill Pelka, for instance, was a weightlifter. He started at 7:10 a.m. in the gym by doing calisthenics, running laps, and working with weights. "I work out for endurance, strength, and to condition for football," he said. "Others help you, and you help others with exercises."

Another junior, Kelley McVoy, has been dancing for ten years. She took lessons at Sharon Foy's studio six hours a week in tap, jazz, and ballet. Kelley hopes to minor in dance at college.

Another sport that several students enjoyed was ice skating. Donna Logie has been skating since fourth grade. Donna, a member of the Garfield Skating Club, skated four days a week, often at 5:30 in the morning. Donna hopes to continue skating for fun and exercise and to finish the different testing levels.

Talent ran high as many students at Garfield became involved in non-competitive sports such as these.

Mirror dared to differ

"More fun than humans should be allowed to have!" That was one of the slogans for the 1983-84 issues of the Garfield Mirror. The school newspaper brought us interesting yet entertaining news about the latest events at the high school.

Ms. Borgio, the faculty advisor, put a lot of time and effort into producing the paper. However, a lot of responsibilities were also upon the shoulders of editors Scott Asche, Toni Ferrante, Bill Janiak, Tammy Majors, and Brenda Walker. Each issue of the Mirror also required the talents of approximately 25 reporters along with five artists and two photographers.

A regular reader of the Mirror, Janet Rickelman, commented, "The overall paper is good, but I enjoy reading the Roving Reporter and Dear Big Guy the most."

Editor Bill Janiak also handled the commercials. He was featured as David Letterman and Mr. T as he broadcasted his slogans on the morning announcements.

The entire staff of the Mirror had much to be proud of. "I think working on the Mirror staff was an enjoyable experience because it gave me the chance to meet new people," said junior Scott Asche.

The eight issues put out during the 1983-84 school year truly were "the papers that dared to be different."

Even Better Than Before

Who would have believed it?

A year ago Garfield Heights students and teachers were wondering whether they'd even be here in 1984. Drastic cuts in programs and staff threatened to end Garfield Heights High School as they had known it and substitute instead a state-controlled alternative sarcastically referred to as "Generic High School."

But the levy passed.

And with those magic words—made real by the hard work of students and staff, and the generosity of Garfield Heights voters—Garfield Heights High School had come back to life. Students had opened their eyes to the situation and felt the impact of its harsh reality. They had gotten to work and ended up breaking tradition.

It was back to business in a way Garfield students had never experienced before. Week after week, students worked and played hard, earning the chance to give themselves some credit. Both the daily routines and the original points of view helped students step ahead to define a sharper image of Garfield Heights

High.

And now, as the 1983-84 school year draws to a close, seniors who feared a year that may have held nothing can look back with the pride of accomplishment and the memories of a dynamic senior year. Underclassmen can look back, too, but ahead as well to the promise of a high school that not only has been rescued from disaster but is now even better than before—thanks to everyone who spent 1983-84 picking up the pieces.

MEDDLING IN THE MIDDLE EAST

Americans who remember Vietnam started to get a little hyper over the U.S. involvement in Lebanon, especially after 240 Marines were killed in a car-bomb attack on their Beirut headquarters. But as warring factions continued killing each other off, the deteriorating situation and public pressure forced President Reagan to issue a February order withdrawing Marines, at least to ships off shore.

IS THERE LIFE AFTER BUSHMILLER?

When Ernie Bushmiller died in 1983, nervous fans of "Nancy" wondered whether their favorite comic strip would change.

No need to worry. When Mark Lasky drew a panel that was almost funny, the syndicate quickly replaced him with Jerry Scott. Nancy and Sluggo are as humorous as ever.

WATT A GUY! (You Can Have Him)

James Watt resigned as Secretary of the Interior after offending nearly every group and individual in the United States, including Jews, women, blacks, handicapped, and the Beach Boys.

Not to mention the environment.

Is the Soviet Union "the focus of evil in the world today," as President Reagan asserted in a 1983 speech?

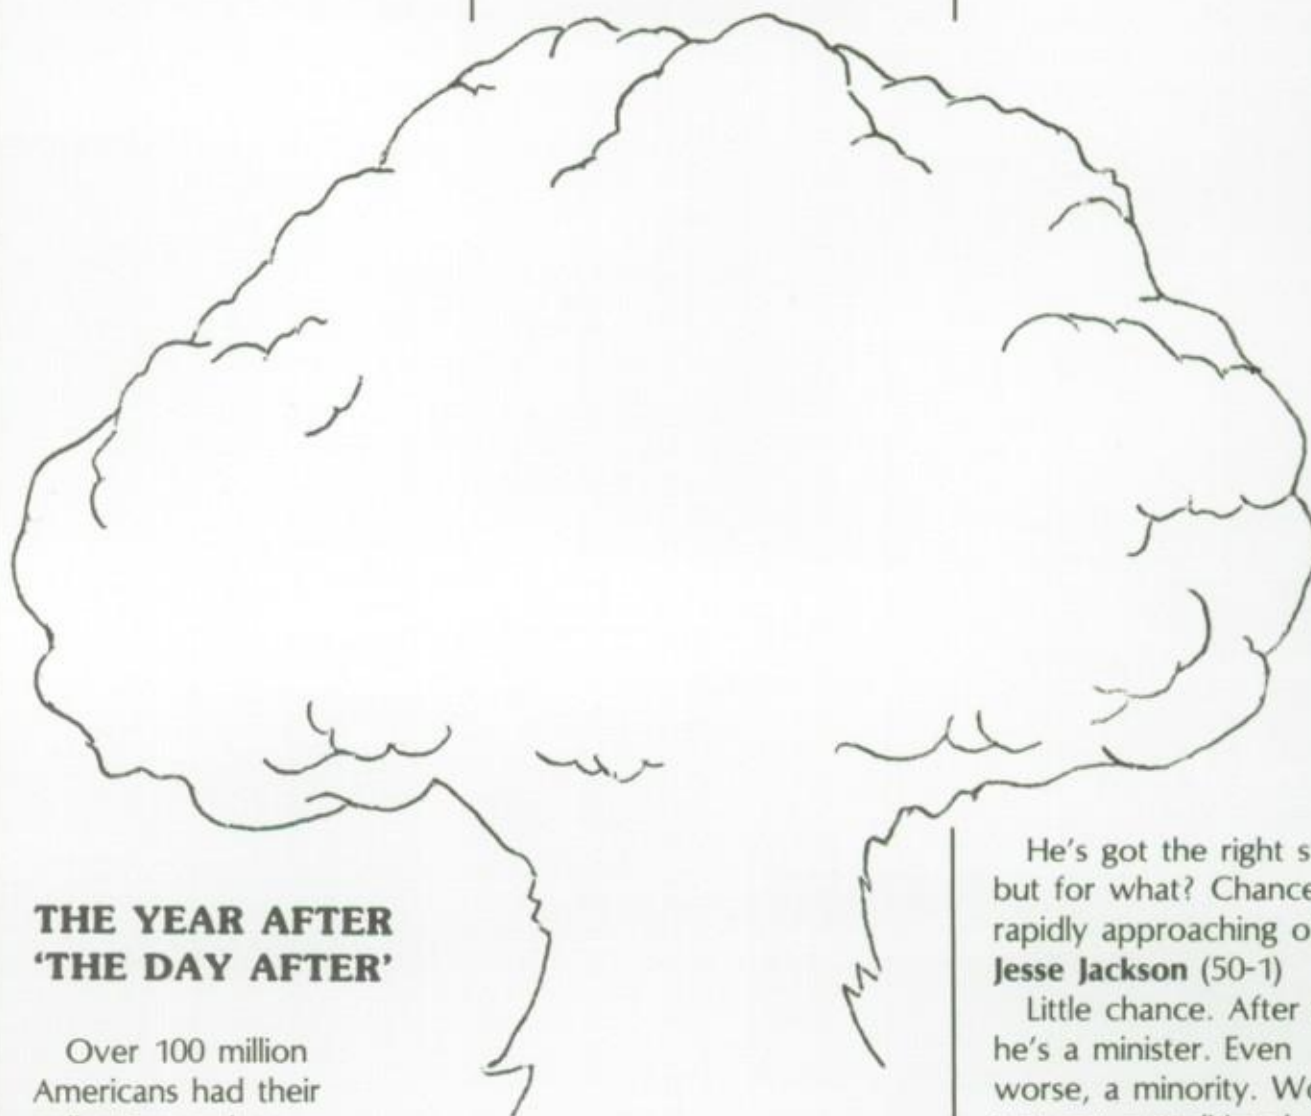

Whether it is or not, the president and his administration acted like they really believed it, and U.S.—Soviet relations sank to the lowest point since the Cuban Missile Crisis of 1962.

For their part, the Soviets did nothing to help the situation. A Soviet fighter shot down an unarmed Korean passenger jet which strayed into Russian airspace, killing all 269 people aboard. Both the U.S.S.R. and the U.S.A.

continued to stockpile and deploy nuclear missiles, and the two superpowers broke off all negotiations to limit further production of nuclear weapons.

After the death of Soviet leader Yuri Andropov in February, both sides hinted at a return to detente.

THE YEAR AFTER 'THE DAY AFTER'

Over 100 million Americans had their collective nuclear consciousness raised the evening of November 20, 1983, when ABC-TV presented "The Day After," a realistic fictional account of how a nuclear war could start and how it would look.

The nuclear freeze movement gained momentum, partly due to the TV movie, but all sides, though disagreeing on how to do it, agreed that the march of nuclear madness had to be stopped.

THE LATEST LINE: PRESIDENT 1984

Ronald Reagan (3-1)

Smart Republican money will go with him. Has done more for rich Americans than anyone since Herbert Hoover.

Walter Mondale (6-1)

Smart Democratic money will go with him. The new Hubert Humphrey.

John Glenn (25-1)

He's got the right stuff, but for what? Chances rapidly approaching orbit. Jesse Jackson (50-1)

Little chance. After all, he's a minister. Even worse, a minority. Worst yet, not a traditional politician.

George McGovern (100-1)

Everyone's sentimental favorite—after all, he was right about Vietnam and Nixon, wasn't he?

Gary Hart (500-1)

He'll never make it. Too smart, too young, too sensible.

Thomas Pamare (even)

Darkhorse candidate. Best bet. Sign up now in yearbook office to join campaign and reap huge political payoffs in November.

BOY, GEORGE, MICHAEL JACKSON WAS A THRILLER

Culture Club, Men at Work, Def Leppard, Quiet Riot, Toto, Hall and Oates, David Bowie—the list of names is endless, but without a doubt the top story in music the past year was Michael Jackson. Sweeping the American Music Awards and capturing practically every other award ever thought of, Jackson and his record-setting album Thriller became a household name.

1983 also saw the emergence of new wave, or just "new music." Acts like Flock of Seagulls, Duran Duran, U2, Adam Ant, The Fixx, Eurythmics, Spandau Ballet, and Talking Heads all came into their own by playing this popular style of music. Cleveland has always been a hot tour stop for all the major music attractions, and '83-84 was no exception as headline acts played to sold-out audiences at the Coliseum, Blossom Music Center, and Public and Music Halls. A few of the most memorable concerts were the Police, Genesis, and Van Halen, who sold out their '84 date at the 20,000-seat Coliseum in less than 45 minutes. Radio still was a major source of music for rock-and-roll fans, and listed below are the top hits for the year as compiled by Billboard magazine.

A 'FORCE' TO BE RECKONED WITH

No longer are they asking, "The Cleveland What?"

All over northeast Ohio, people now know the Cleveland Force. The Force has grown to be a legitimate playoff team and an honest-to-goodness championship contender—in Cleveland.

The Force is a charter member of the Major Indoor Soccer League, which began in 1978. In that first season the team stumbled to a 5-19 record, firmly in last place.

Ownership of the team changed hands with Bert Wolstein taking over for the '79-80 season. That started things improving.

Timo Liekoski was hired as coach for the 1982-83 season which proved to be a most productive year. The Force finished with a 29-19 record, good enough for second place in the Eastern Division and a spot in the play-offs. Even though the Force lost in the semi-finals to Baltimore, 4 games to 3, they gained respect around the league and support from fans in northeast Ohio.

The Force continued their winning ways as they started the '83-84 season by winning 11 consecutive games and at the midpoint of the campaign were in first place atop the Eastern Division.

BRIAN BAILS OUT FOR THE BUCKS

The time of Brian Sipe is over—at least in Cleveland. The Browns' quarterback signed a $3 million contract with the New Jersey Generals of the USFL, leaving Paul Macdonald at the Browns' helm.

17

But losing Brian didn't rattle Cleveland fans. With the Indians, Cavaliers, and Browns, they're used to losing. Wait 'til next year!

IT GOES WITH THE TERRITORY

November was election time in Garfield Heights. Thomas Longo stepped in as the new mayor, and many other officials were also elected to their present posts.

But one incident made the '83 election just a little more exciting than usual. It gained so much attention that it made the Cleveland newspaper, TV, radio, and even the nationally shown program, "Good Morning America."

Why all this attention?

Political contests always bring tension and uneasiness. With election day pressures mounting, an unfortunate incident resulted. A fist fight erupted involving then—Ward 5 councilman Dan Rogers and opponent Robert Foster.

Foster lost the fight but won the election, and charges were pressed by both parties.

Later, though, showing their true colors, both men dropped all charges, and all was forgiven.

BUT WILL A DOME KNOCK IN ANY RUNS?

Who needs relief pitching and a power hitter when you can have a domed stadium?

Cuyahoga County commissioners cooked up a great idea for the hapless Indians and the bumbling Browns: build a domed stadium downtown. And the best part is, the teams won't even have to pay for it!

Who will?

Why, the taxpayers, of course! That is, if they approve the issue in this spring's primary election.

Now maybe if they can set up some movable fences in the outfield so when the Indians come up to bat ...

The community of Garfield Heights lost a respectable citizen this past summer.

Red, Garfield's self-appointed bulldog mascot, died an untimely death, which sent hundreds of fans and followers of all ages into a state of manic-depression and deep mourning.

A celebrity in the public's eye and idolized by many, Red had a simple outlook on life that was often misunderstood. True, Red was sometimes a little hard-nosed, but one has to be tough in the mascot business; there's no room for second best, and Red was second to none.

Red spread as much of himself around as possible, giving his attention and time wherever and whenever it was needed.

Red was a familiar sight at Friday night football games as he

Dog Gone

Dead in the dog days of summer

stalked the sidelines making sure the cheerleaders practiced their jumps by leaving "mine fields" for the cheerleaders to clear.

Patrolling the varsity practice field during the football team's early morning double session workouts was a daily summer routine for him.

Even after attending an exhausting three hour meeting of the LEL mascots the night before, Red was still at the field in the 80-degree sweltering heat, barking instructions to the waterboys, making sure the players didn't dehydrate.

And on that fateful late August morning, Red even gave the ball boys a break as he returned the footballs that field goal kicker Gary Vidovic was booting through the uprights.

Red returned over two dozen kicks and was looking quite sluggish and weary before Vidovic suggested maybe he better rest a bit.

"I said, 'You better take it easy, Red, you look burned out,' but he just continued to his position under the goal posts and suddenly collapsed."

Paramedics and trauma teams

NAME THAT (OLYMPIC) TUNE

Boom-boom-boom! Da-da-da-da-da...

Well, in case you haven't guessed, that's the Olympic theme song, and it was back in 1984 as ABC-TV brought us 26-hour a day coverage of both the Winter Games from Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, and the Summer Games from Los Angeles. Without Howard Cosell announcing, though, it seemed like only, say, 19 or 20 hours a day.

As usual, Americans struggled against high odds in the snowstorms of February, losing out to East Germany's new "shark" bobsleds and the great ice hockey teams of Europe. But in figure skating and skiing the USA did much better.

America's hopes were high for success during the summer games on our own West Coast.

And just think: only four more years and Jim McKay will be back!

rushed to the scene and immediately tried to revive the pooped pooch, but it was too late.

Red was dead...a definite victim of Bulldog Burnout.

Since Red's death, another mascot has entered the scene, a bulldog by the name of Smoky. Though gaining popularity, Smoky has some big shoes to fill, or should we say collar?

Red definitely will be missed but never forgotten. Just check the bottom of your shoes.

IS THERE LIFE AFTER JOHNNY CARSON?

February 23, 1984. Thursday night, Friday morning—take your pick, it's 12:30 a.m. In other words, it's late and you are still up. You're trying to finish three pages of calculus homework and at the same time type your term paper on "The Dangers of Saccharine in Diet Pop," which is due Friday first period.

Meanwhile, every radio station is playing a Michael Jackson song, and your bowl of Fruity Pebbles has turned soggy.

What the hell, you might as well watch some TV. So your grab the TV guide with Nancy and Sluggo and Milton the toaster on the cover and see what's on.: 12:30 a.m.

Ch. 5 Bonanza—Hoss criticizes Hop-Sing's cooking and is thrown off the Ponderosa by Mr. Cartwright and Lil Joe.
Ch. 8 Hawaii Five-O—Kono gets food poisoning from a four-star restaurant.

Ch. 23 700 Club—Boxcar Willie talks about his "re-birth."

Ch. 25 The Magic of Oil Painting.

Ch. 43 Soul Train—Redd Foxx sings from his first album.

Ch. 61 Movie: "Diary of a Teenage Charlie Chan Impersonator."

Gee, finer late night TV viewing can't be found anywhere.

Aw, road apples.

Every Monday through Thursday at 12:30 a.m., a highly entertaining, culturally enriching, quality TV program invades the airwaves of NBC to save all mankind from the sheer treachery of Ironside, Maude, Columbo, and other repulsive re-runs.

This mind enriching program is Late Night With David Letterman.

Late Night has been capturing this insomniac audience for two years as the popularity of the show grows with each night. Letterman has a cult-like following across the country as well as in Garfield Heights.

Bill Janiak, a Late Night junkie, watches the show every night he can. "I sometimes go to bed early and set my alarm for 12:30 so I can stay up til 1:30."

Being a hard core Late Night fan is hard. It takes dedication to stay up into the early morning; but with personalities like Larry "Bud" Mellman, Bill Wendt, Pee Wee Herman, and band leader extra-ordinaire Paul Schaefer, the bags and dark circles under your eyes seem worth it.

Popular features of Late Night include stupid pet tricks, stupid human tricks, viewer mail, book mobiles, and elevator races.

With all this quality entertainment, why would anyone want to sleep when you can watch Late Night with David Letterman?

And by gosh, don't ya think we ought to?

ONE TRAGEDY AFTER ANOTHER

"Jenny and Greg are getting married today, and I have to miss it!"

OK, soap opera fans, can you name the soap and the date this wail was heard in the halls of Garfield High?

(Pssst! All My Children, Valentine's Day!)

WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO NOW?

John Orland: Campaign for the '88 presidency.

Vickie Nose: Lose the green mobile and capture an oak tree.

Karen Samardge: Go to New York and start college.

Heidi Ferrence: Relax and let the good times roll.

Frank Knittel: Quit McDonald's and go on a trip.

Rick Bowler: Lay back and get fat.

Sharon Huml: Visit California.

Jim Walchanowicz: Practice for the '88 Olympics.

Rhonda Buynak: Relax and enjoy my family.

Karen Tucholski: Move on to bigger and better things.

Mike Pollack: Play baseball before going to college.

Melinda Corpus: Go to the Bahamas and water ski.

Cheryl Blatnik: Relax and spend time with my friends.

Stephanie Pelka: Do something totally wild before college.

Kimm Gunn: Go to work and get rich.

David Glinski: Find myself.

Nancy Pirrone: Assist David in finding himself.

Rob Sigmund: Explore places where no man has been before.

Lisa Skerl: Hold the musical pictures hostage to drive J crazy.

Joe Gabriele: Have more fun than humans should be allowed to have.

We've got class

Seniors	111
Juniors	124
Sophomores	132
Freshmen	140
Faculty	148
Clubs & Teams	152

Throughout high school, students look forward to the prestige of their senior year.

"Coming to the high school was a good change that will get better as we go from freshmen to seniors," commented John Perkins, class of '87.

"The class of '86 is rowdie, will stay rowdie, and when we're seniors be rowdier than any other senior class," remarked sophomore Tony Carriero.

"As our senior year is coming closer, our class is coming alive," said Patty Bellomo, class of '85.

The glories of senior year everyone looks forward to. But at Garfield, being a senior puts the icing on the cake.

Sure, there were things that made each class original. For example, freshmen made the middle-to-high school transition, while sophomores gave seniors a run for their money in various contests. As for the upperclassmen, juniors struggled through the "junior blues" and presenior excitement while seniors lived up "their year."

But when it came to school activities and friendships, grade levels made little difference. Freshmen through seniors got together among their own cliques as well as with each other to share many great times. They soon found that high school years were among the best of your life. Throughout 1983-84, many unforgettable friendships were made.

But what happens when the long-dreamed of senior status is reached and graduation is near? "I've been waiting to be a senior, and it was well worth it," said Cyndy Sibits. "But now I don't want to leave all my friends."

SCHOOL SYSTEM

DIRECTORS: Dr. Joseph Bongorno, Mr. Rich Golenski, Mr. Jack Hartman (Treasurer), Mr. Ralph Witter, Mr. Tom Wrabel.

SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS DR. JAMES HARPER

AFTER 16 YEARS as superintendent of the Garfield Heights City Schools, Dr. James A. Harper (left, with Booster Club president Dan Brindza at the fall football rally) retired this year. "I love the school system and I'll miss the work," said Dr. Harper, "but all good things must come to an end, and my time has come to move on to other things." As his greatest accomplishment, Dr. Harper cited "keeping all of the programs we offer in the schools, even when we had trouble with funds."

A large group photograph of the 1980-1981 Student Body. The students are arranged in approximately five rows, posing for a formal group portrait. They are dressed in typical 1980s attire, including sweaters, blouses, and button-down shirts. The group is diverse in age and ethnicity, with many students smiling at the camera. The background is a plain, light-colored wall.

GOOD LUCK CLASS OF '84

BUSINESS MANAGER Chris Austin never found that missing advertising revenue—or did he?

INDEX EDITOR Ray Puccetti finally gave up trying to computerize the index.

EDITOR Renee Palshook spent hours preparing for student reaction to the 1984 yearbook.

CAPTION EDITOR Debbie Zauszniewski found that IOE training came in handy for figuring all those captions.

YEARBOOK CLASS was just like a family. When deadlines approached, they often spent the night at the office and enjoyed breakfast together in the morning. Here they are: Amy Rawlins, Melinda Corpus, Steve Romak, Lisa Kaliszewski, and Baby J. Oh, yeah, Barb Polak had to leave, and Mom just noticed that she forgot her lunch.

FACULTY ADVISOR Mr. Jambor tried hard to look like a working journalist and spent lots of time gazing at his publishing empire on the third floor.

Inter-Collegiate Press printed 577 copies of PICKING UP THE PIECES. The sunny yellow and medium blue cover was silk-screened on shoe-grain. Endsheets are gray rainbow cover weight, and the book was printed on Leatherweave matte finish paper.

Headlines are 48 pt. Souvenir Bold, subheads 18 pt. Optimist Bold. Body copy is 10 pt. Optimist with captions in 8 pt. Souvenir Bold with 1 pt. leading. The contemporary design of the front section is by Renee Palshook.

The 1983 Garfield Heights yearbook won a First Place award from Columbia Scholastic Press Assn. and a Buckeye Award from Great Lakes Interscholastic Press Assn.

Our thanks to Jim Barbour of ICP and to Tim, Glenn, Jeanne, and Joyce at Tim Carnes Photography.

WILMINGTON HEIGHTS HIGH SCHOOL

ONE LAST LOOK at 1983-84. But wait! There's a piece missing! Oh, yes, that piece belongs to you. Would you mind picking it up and putting it in place? Thanks.
